U.S. Craft Starts Journey To Jupiter and Beyond

By John Noble Wilford

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla., March 3 (NYT),-The spacecraft Pioneer-10 was launch-ed last night on the first mission to explore the environs of the planet Jupiter. Space agency officials said the unmanned spacecraft should reach Jupiter in 22 months—the longest and most far - reaching interplanetary voyage of the space age. The launching, originally set for Sunday, was postponed three times-first because of a momentary power shutdown in the blockhouse, and twice by sterce high-altitude winds. Pioneer-10 lifted off after a 25-minute delay because of an unexplained technical problem. In 16 minutes, launching officials said that the spacecraft was traveling 31,413

Kennedy Hints Kleindienst Knew of ITT Deal

By Robert Siner

WASHINGTON, March 3 (IHT).—Richard G. Kleindienst today denied knowledge of a charge that an International Telephone and Telegraph pledge to help underwrite the Republican National Convention next August was related to the settlement of anti-trust suits against the giant corporation.

President Nixon's nominee to the nation's highest law-enforcement post repeated to the Senate Judiciary Committee testimony given yesterday that he did not know that ITT had promised up to $400,000 to the city of San Diego to defray convention costs until he read about it in the newspapers in late November or early December.

Mr. Kleindienst restated his denial after Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D., Mass., introduced a letter dated Sept. 21, written to the then deputy attorney general asking Mr. Kleindienst about the settlement of the case.

The letter, which Sen. Kennedy said had been written by an associate of consumer advocate Raiph Nader, asked who had made the settlement, and if it was related to ITT's reported financial support of the GOP convention.

Sen. Kennedy told the committee that on the next day Judge of the Justice Department Anti-trust Division, had replied by letter stating that the settlement had been worked out by the anti-trust division and that there was no relation beween it and the reported ITT contribution promise. Judge McLaren has also denied to the judiciary panel that he had known of the ITT pledge until the story broke in the newspapers. Sen. Kennedy then asked Mr. Kleindienst how Judge McLaren could have given these assurances without talking to you."

Richard G. Kleindienst

Mr. Kleindienst replied that he did not remember receiving the letter or talking about it with Judge McLaren, but he added that the judge's letter indicated that the anti-trust chief had called him about it. After the Kennedy-Kleindlenst exchange, committee chairman James O. Eastland, D. Miss., abruptly recessed the hearings until Tuesday, saying that three surprise witnesses would then be summoned to testify in con-

Mr. Nixon resumed the aid in an executive move Feb. 17, only 10 dars after signing a bill that ing the United States from providing aid to the military junta

Mr. Nixon's action became known yesterday when the State Department informed the chair-men of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. In a memorandum to Secretary of State William P. Rogers, Mr.

Nixon said "overriding requirements of the national security of the United States justify a waiver of the prohibition" placed in the Foreign Aid Act by Congress. The action was taken in re-sponse to a memorandum Mr. Rogers sent to Mr. Nixon one day after the President signed the bill into law. The secretary said Greece will continue to need to fulfill its NATO mission against Soviet-bloc forces in the area. "The Soviet naval buildup on the southern flank of the alliance has enhanced the importance of the Greek role," Mr. Rogers said, "The facilities which Greece offers to the United States and NATO would be essential in any conflict with the Warsaw Pact in the eastern Mediterranean."

Although Congress specifically forbade aid to Greece, the act allows the President to spend amounts equal to appropriations for the prior fiscal year in any matter involving national se-

Dayan Warns Lebanon, Syria Of New Incursion

TEL AVIV, March 3 (Reuters). -Gen, Moshe Dayan, the Israeli defense minister, tonight warned Lebanon and Syria that Israeli forces might enter their territory if this became imperative to safe guard Israeli citizens from Arab guerrilla attacks. In an interview on Israeli television, the defense minister said both Lebanon and Syria should endeavor to curb and finally put an end to Arab guerrilla operations from their territory. He said that the guerrillas, after being expelled from Jordan, and without being able to operate from Lebanon or Syria, would disintegrate,

Asked about the consequences if Arab guerrilla activity from Lebanon continued, Gen. Dayan said: "We cannot discount the possibility of our forces crossing the border, if this should be necessary to protect Israeli citizens

"But especially because I do not think that this is a matter for a single operation. I hardly feel that future developments can be defined by any single action. This is a process. Bhutto Purges Two Officers Who Brought Him to Power

By Malcolm W. Browne

RAWALPINDL Pakistan, March 3 (NYT).—President Zulfikar All Bhutto of Pakistan today purged the two military officers most responsible for putting him in power last December. He accused them "Bonapartic" actions. President Bhutto also warned that he would not tolerate breaches in law and order and implied that he would crack down on some forms of political opposition in what he termed "the higher interest of the retion." Key places in Rawalpindi were placed under military guard this afternoon and the telegraph office was closed for a time. Lt. Gen. Gul Hasan Khan was ousted as acting commander-in-chief of Pakistan's armed forces and Air Marshal Abdul Rahim the army today. Command of the air force was transferred to M. Zafir Chowdery, who was promoted to air marshal. He had been serving as general manager of Pakistan's civilian airline.

Publicly, the archbishop, who has been president since Cyprus became independent from Britain in 1960, has remained silent on his bishops' demands. Some observers connected the move by the bishops with pressure on President Makarios by the Greek government, which has asked him to reshufile his cabinet and hand over shipments of Czechoslovak arms to the UN peace-keeping force on the island.

Brandt Resignation. New Elections Possible

Concern Rises in Bonn on Ostpolitik's Fate majority to one single vote in the treaties an issue of confidence the Bundestag, or lower house, in his regime. If ratification fails, if the Bundesrat or upper he will resign, and new elections By Joe Alex Morris

BONN, March 3.-There is growing concern in government ranks here that Chancellor Willy Brandt's Ostpolitik is not going to make the parliamentary hurdle and there could be new elections before the summer is out.

The atmosphere is not one of panic. But nervousness has repleced a studied calm in regime circles when the subject of the treaties with Moscow and Warsaw comes up.

This was not provoked by the desertion of Social Democratic deputy Herbert Hupka, who "out of concern over the unity and freedom of Germany" switched to the opposition ranks last week. Mr. Hupka, a refugee leader from Silesia, in what is now Poland, had been expected to vote against the treaties.

What alarmed government ranks was the lingering doubts of a Free Democrat deputy, Knut von Kuehlmann Stumm, whose worries about the treaties have not yet been overcome. If he sticks to this position, it will reduce the coalition's absolute house, rejects the treatles, the government must get an absolute majority in the 496-seat Bundestag. One sick deputy, or one more defection, and the treaties which won Mr. Brandt the Nobel Peace Prize will be rejected.

Flood Toll at 84 In West Virginia MAN, W. Va., March 3 (AP).-

National Guardsmen found eight more bodies in the rubble of Buffalo Creek Hollow yesterday, increasing the death toll in last Saturday's flood to 84.

About 100 persons are still uncounited for and rescue officials said they expected the toll to rise higher. Along the hollow—the former site of 16 mining camps scores of houses have not been checked for bodies. The Red Cross listed 1,119 persons injured, with 28 still to square one. There is one slight possibility that it may not come to a razorthin absolute majority vote in the Bundestag. If the Bonn coalition parties can prevent the Christian Democrats from gaining an absolute majority in the Baden-Wuerttemberg state election April 23, they can take over control of the state.

This would swing the state's vote in the Bundesrat to the Bonn coalition, ending the present situation where the Bonn opposition holds a 21-20 margin in the upper house.

As if he didn't have enough to worry about, Mr. Brandt was forced to step in and smooth over (Continued on Page 2, Col. 7)

BELFAST, March 3 (UPI).-Prime Minister Brian Faulkner today hinted at possible changes in the Northern Ireland parliamentary structure but said his government would resist any attempt to separate the province from the rest of the United Kingdom.

"We are a part of the United Kingdom, on a full equality with other parts," Mr. Faulkner said in a speech to the annual meeting of the Ulster Unionist Coun-cil "Any attempt to cut off such a part without the consent of the people would be unconstitu-tional, and we would resist it."

He said government institutions in the province have to be strengthened and added: "Changes in the parliamentary machinery may well have a part to play in that strengthening.

Mr. Faulkner also said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's recent call for a withdrawal of British troops from Northern Ireland "revealed the depths of his prejudice and

WASHINGTON, March 3 (NYT).-State and Defense Department sources say that the Soviet Union, after years of keeping old nuclear weapons deployed even as it continued to install large numbers of newer weapons now appears to be engaged in a significant program of retiring medium-range and intermediate-range missiles.

They say that about 140 SS-4 and SS-5 missiles, with ranges of 1,000 to 2,000 miles, have been removed from sites in both the European and Asian parts of the Soviet Union.

This development, the informants say, is encouraging in that it suggests that Soviet leaders feel they have enough weapons of limited range, or that bud-getary constraints are forcing them to retire some of the ex-pensive-to-operate and less well protected weapons, or that both factors are at work.

ICBMs Not Touched

However, no retirements have reportedly been discerned among the more than 1,500 intercontinental ballistic missiles that can reach targets throughout United States.

"Even if the Russians wanted to discard the roughly 220 of their vintage SS-7 and SS-8 ICBMs, they wouldn't be likely to do so unilaterally while we are ne-gotiating mutual limits on ICBM forces," a Pentagon analyst said. By the same token, he said. the United States has been thinking of retiring its 54 old Titan-2 ICBMs, but is reluctant to do so until the shape of possible arms-control agreements becomes clearer. In general, the United States, as a matter of policy, has retired old weapons as modern replacements have been

Space Program Use

Analysts here say that the Russians, rather than scrap those SS-4 and SS-5 missiles that are removed from operation sites, are expected to use them, in a modi-fied configuration, as booster rockets in their space program. Officials here stressed that despite the Soviet dismantling of older missiles, which was first noted in Soviet Asia in late 1969 or early 1970, the total number of missiles that can be used at medium and intermediate ranges has remained steady at about 700. Beginning in the fall of 1969, they report, the Soviet Union started to install some special

SS-11 intercontinental missiles in hardened siles in complexes in the southwestern part of the country, where only medium and intermediate-range missiles had previously been seen. In addition, officials here say, many of the more than 90 mysterious new siles, in which no missiles have yet apparently been installed, have been constructed in the area traditionally used for medium-range and intermedate-ra missiles.

Hanoi Issues Sharp Attack Against Nixon

PARIS. March 3 (AP).-North Vietnam today levelled one of its sharpest attacks on President Nixon, calling him a "bloodthirsty imperialist chief."

A lengthy article in the North Vietnamese Communist party newspaper Nhan Dan today bitterly criticized the U.S. position on the Vietnam war, as laid down in the Shanghai communiqué ending Mr. Nixon's visit to China, The article was signed by "The Commentator," indicating it was written or approved by a high North Vietnamese party official. It was made available here by the North Vietnamese delegation to the Vietnam peace talks.

Analysis of Communique

Much of the article was an analysis of statements in the Shanghai communiqué, although the communiqué itself and China were not specifically mentioned The article referred to statements in "a document"-specifically the U.S. position supporting "self-determination for each country of Indochina," and the eightpoint U.S. peace plan, presented as a basis for a "negotiated set-tlement" of the war, Nhan Dan wrote this off as so much "noise." It referred to Mr. Nixon as a "chief pirate who was hiding his

"I opened the discussion," replied Mr. Bray, "by describing the positive chemistry which was ob-vious in all of these sessions and encounters. The point was made that these good encounters were a historical fact over many years. And in that sense the bad chemistry over the past 20 years

In the staff briefing, said Mr. Bray, "the point was made that there was direct and immediate benefit, intangible but important, derived from the simple fact that the highest officials of the two countries over eight days had intensive, repetitive opportunities in business and social surroundings to improve their understanding of each other."
Mr. Bray repeated, as other of-

Henry Kissinger and raid

So far the government's principal witness has been PBI informer Boyd Douglas, who testified yesterday that Sister Elizabeth McAlister phoned him in the third week of August, 1970, and warned him that a "very hot letter" was on its way.

It was so "hot," Douglas said at the trial of Sister Elizabeth and six other anti-war activists, that "she told me that when I received it I should read it thoroughly and if I thought there was any chance of being apprehended inside the penitentiary, I should memorize it, destroy it and tell Philip Berrigan the contents." . With that testimony from its chief witness, the government was approaching the point at which it will try to prove that defendants conspired to kidnap presidential adviser Henry A: Kissinger. The feasibility of such a kidnapping as a protest against the Vietnam war is raised in letters expected to be admitted as evidence today. They allegedly were written by Sister McAlister and Father Berrigan in August, 1970, while he was a prisoner at the Lewisburg, Pa, federal penitentiary.

In addition to conspiracy to kidnap Mr. Kissinger, the seven are charged with conspiracy to bomb tunnels under federal buildings in Washington and conspiracy to raid federal offices in several states.

Douglas, who has testified that he had been illegally carrying letters for the two since Father Berrigan came to Lewisburg in late April, 1970, said he first heard kidnapping mentioned by one of the Catholic activists in mid-August of 1970. Douglas, who was allowed out of prison to study at Bucknell University, said he met with Sister McAllster and Sister Sue Davis, a Baltimore nun, in the home of Zoia Horn, a librarian at the university.

"... Sue Dayis asked me what thought and what I thought Philip Berrigan would think of political kidnapping," said Dong-ias, continuing, "I told her I could not speak for Philip Berrigan but I did not see how it could be done

nonviolently."

By that time, Douglas had testified earlier, he already had told the Rev. Joseph Wenderoth, a Baltimore priest and one of the defendants, that he would participate in the destruction of heating systems in the tunnels of Washington. Douglas said he asked Sister

Davis if she knew about the "Washington action" and she said. "Yes, you're in charge of explosives." Sister Davis was named as an unindicted co-conspirator in the case two months ago.

In Charge of Explosives Anthony Scoblick, another defendant and former Baltimore priest, allegedly told Douglas in mid-August on a different occasion, "that I (Douglas) would be in charge of the explosives."

"Anthony Scoblick asked me about the use of primer cord," Douglas said. "He further told me he would be working on the tunnel system in Washington in coming months and that my identity would remain secret.

"My job, he said, would be solely to teach others how to use the explosives or place the explosives in the tunnel myself." Mr. Scoblick, according to Douglas, thought the "Washington project" would "escalate the Catholic movement."

"He felt this type of action had to be done," Douglas said, "because the United States government was not taking the Catholic left seriously enough by just the draft-board actions."

Another defendant was also referred to by Douglas as being part of the tunnel project. He testified that Mary Cain Scoblick, a former nun from Baltimore and wife of Anthony Scoblick, told him in mid-August, "I'm glad we have someone who knows the use of explosives so we won't blow ourselves up."

U.S. Tests A-Power to Run Artificial Heart

By Harold M. Schmeck Jr. WASHINGTON, March 3 (NYT).—The first use of nuclear energy to power an artificial heart pump in a living animal was announced yesterday by the National Heart and Lung Institute. It is sponsoring a major research effort to make such devices available eventually for man. Also announced was the development and use in animals of the first complete artificial heart that is fotally implantable. This too is designed for use with a nuclear power source, but it has not been tested in that way in an animal. It has been tested with non-nuclear electrical power. The complete artificial heart has a total volume slightly less than a quart, somewhat greater than the natural heart. It weighs about four pounds, in contrast to about 1 1/2 pounds for a

The device goes into an animal's chest in the place normully occupied by the heart, with the power source and miniature computer housed in a three-by-eightinch cylinder placed in the abnormal human heart.

In the models used to date the implanted conventional battery would last about three hours but could be recharged from the outside by an induction coil under the skin. This arrangement would be unnecessary with a nuclear power source.

Still Years Away

At a news conference, Dr. Theodore Cooper, director of the heart institute, said nuclearpowered artificial heart devices might become available for use in humans by the end of this decade. Estimates of how many people might need them range from 15,000 to 100,000 a year.

Dr. Cooper called the development of the nuclear power system a major milestone in a re-1964. The aim is to develop a system of artificial devices to help patients with heart disease, the leading cause of death in the United States.

The nuclear power system was tested for about 5,000 hours in the laboratory before being tried in an animal, said Dr. Lowell T. Harmison, who heads the artificial heart program at the institute, part of the National Institutes of Health

Its first use in an animal, to power a heart booster pump, was on Feb. 14 at Boston City Hospital. A research team from Har-vard Medical School and the Thermo Electron Corp. of Waltham, Mass., kept it operating for about five hours in a calf before removing the device.

During that time it replaced the action of the heart's main pumping chamber, the left ven-tricle. Dr. John C. Norman of Harvard said the artificial device had been tested, with a nonnuclear power source, in 12 calves before the test on Feb. 14. He said the safety of the nuclear power source had been tested

Drug Tofranil Found to Deform Unborn Babies

SYDNEY, March 3 (Reuters). A gynecologist who helped discover the crippling effects of the drug Thalidomide warned today that a second, commonly prescribed drug can cause limb deformities in unborn babies.

The drug is Imipramine-marketed under the brand name Tofranil-generally used for the treatment of depression and metimes inadvertently prescribed for pregnant women suffering from pre-natal bouts of crying, fatigue and headaches. Dr. William McBride, honored for his discoveries of the effects of Thalidomide on unborn babies, said the Swiss-manufectured Imipramine had similar results as Thalidomide if taken by women in early pregnancy.

He said in the latest edition of the Australian Medical Journal that he had definite proof, after lengthy research, that Imipramine caused deformities in at least three Sydney children and possibly another four.

In Basel, a spokesman for the firm Ciba-Geigy, which manufactures Tofranil, said that the a layer of living tissue on the With Two Murders drug is sold only under prescription and that it carries a specific warning that it should not be prescribed to pregnant women.

Electron, that only one drop of water is vaporized at a time while it is operating.

Dr. Fred N. Huffman of Thermo

Dr. Harmison said that aiready the pumping efficiency of the artificial devices surpasses that of the natural heart. The implantable device includes a miniature commuter that matrices the artificial heart's action to the body's needs. Experiments have dem-onstrated that some drugs that affect normal heart action have comparable effect on the artificial device, since the computer responds to the drugs' effects on blood vessels.

The complete artifical heart, linked to conventional electric power sources, has been used in calves for as long as two days at a time, totally implanted and completely replacing the animal's netural organ. Dr. Harmison said these experiments had been done at Travenol Laboratories near In other experiments, animals have been kept alive as long as 10 days with artificial hearts, but these have not been totally implanted. Dr. Harmison said. The power source and instrumentation are usually external.

Estimate of Cost

Dr. Cooper and Dr. Harmison could give only rough estimates of what artificial heart devices and the surgery to implant them might cost. One estimate was $5,000 for the device and perhaps $18,000 for the surgery and related

Although production of a durable, efficient power source has been a major problem in artificial heart development, the crucial obstacle has been that of developing a material sufficiently compatible with blood, Dr. Harmison said that present designs use a special Dacron material.

Social Security Card Urged In 1st Grade by Senate Unit WASHINGTON. March 3 method of identification, the (NYT). — The Senate Finance Committee has voted to require that each child be issued a social security card upon entering the first grade.

The committee also voted vesterday to require issuance of social security cards to immigrants upon legal entry into this country and to all welfare applicapts who do not have such cards. Anyone who applied for a social security number at any other time of his life would be closely questioned, under the committee provision.

Sen. Russell Long, D., La., chairman of the committee, explained later that the committee had voted to require assignment of social security members to these three groups to "prevent abuse.

'Welfare Chiselers' Sen. Long was referring primarily to abuse by those he has called the "welfare chiselers." He says he has found cases in which persons on welfare have obtained five or more welfare checks monthly by applying under different names and furnishing social security cards issued in those names.

By seeking to make the social security card the universal committee said this would give a closer check on preventing issuance of more than one number to a person, The committee action could prove highly controversial, particularly among critics of government invasion of privacy. Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D., N.C., has frequently expressed concern about the apparent trend toward use of a single identification number which, when fed into a computer, could produce a vast amount of information about a given citizen. The requirement for assignment of social security numbers to first-graders would be effective Jan. 1, 1974. For legal aliens and welfare applicants, it would be effective upon enactment of the law.

The proposal was written by the committee into pending legislation to increase social security benefits and reform the welfare system. Finel committee action on the full hill is not empected for several weeks. The committee also voted yesterday to impose on low-moome workers some of the tax burden of paying for increases in social security benefits automatically tied to rises in the cost of living.

In percentage terms, the rates for poorer women-family income under $5,000-declined 21 percent. only a little faster than the 18 percent decline for others. And their rates remained significantly higher than for the population as a whole.

China's Role in Peking Summit

Mr. Nixon's China diplomacy are now laying at the White House door, we would make a brief addendum. It is doubtless quite true that the reopening of an American dialogue with China was the most significant achievement of the trip; the Democrats tried in the 1960s but failed because they were escalating in Vietnam at the same time. We trust. too, that the current flare of debate over whether President Nixon cared adequately for America's allies on China's Pacific rim will yield to careful diplomatic ministration. and to the perspective of time. And although we think Mr. Nixon overdid the TV bit badly. we grant that television probably helped educate the American people in the essential lesson that China is not a monster, merely another nation to be dealt with as best one can. The allegation that his commitment to a success on the tube allowed Peking to wring concessions he would not otherwise have granted is interesting but so far un-

Nevertheless, the results of the summit. however they will eventually be toted, can by no means be attributed solely to the personal initiative or virtuosity of Richard Nixon. It is no disparagement of his own performance to note that the summit was made possible by two great events over which he had virtually no control. The first was the charge of the American people, expressed in political terms by the election of Mr. Nixon in 1968, to end the American role in the Vietnam war-a charge accepted but not yet fulfilled by the President. The electorate thus withdrew its mandate for further support of the cause of the "containment" of Communist China, in Vietnam and elsewhere. Americans as a whole, we surmise, were ready for a reconciliation with China. The surprise—and it was a surprise. a welcome one—was that Mr. Nixon turned out to recognize the new requirements and possibilities, and started acting on them. That is part of how he got to Peking.

The second great event which helped produce the summit was, of course, the gathering Sino-Soviet crisis. Just as Vietnam prepared Americans to reach out to

To the tributes which the admirers of Peking so fear of the Russians prepared the Chinese to reach out to Washington. Indeed, in that sense, the Kremlin could fairly be said to have "hosted" the Peking summit. Surely the Cultural Revolution was, in at least one aspect, an effort to steel the Chinese people for a long ordeal of Soviet hostility. The Chinese opening to Mr. Nixon was part of a similar effort to reduce tensions on the "American front" in order to be better prepared on the Russian front.

This is not to say Mr. Nixon has enlisted in China's cause or is a silent partner of China in a potential Sino-Soviet showdown. But as little as four years ago, China had both great powers building or maintaining huge military formations on its borders: A truly frightening situation from even the most prudent Chinese viewpoint. Now it faces only one such hostile formation. Unquestionably, this is the greatest "gain" from the summit for Peking-this alone may explain the triumphant reception Chou Enlai received Tuesday in Peking upon his return from Shanghai, where he had left Mr. Nixon. And this is also why, we would guess. Chou accepted such an indefinitely timed pledge on withdrawal from Taiwan by Mr. Nixon. Peking's priorities were clear: first to cope with the immediate and pressing danger from the north, and only then to arrange for the eventual and peaceable retrieval of Talwan.

Finally, it is fair to ask how lasting will be any positive results of this meeting, or rather, how fully will such results flower. Part of the answer depends on continuity of political leadership: Will Chou, the apparent architect of Peking's outreach, last much longer? And would a Democratic president have Mr. Nixon's latitude for accommodation? Another part of the answer depends on the degree to which a taste for a continuing responsible role in Asia will survive the end of American participation in the Vietnam war. A third part depends on the evolution of American relations with the Soviet Union. It is quite so that Mr. Nixon, by going to Peking. has made it possible for such questions to be asked. But the answers are something else again.

Democrats Gloomy But Mood Likely to Change

By James Reston

WASHINGTON. — The Republicans are very much up and the Democrats very far down these days, but that's the way it usually is for the "outs" just be-fore the first presidential primary election, and the present mood is likely to change dramatically in the nine months before the

For one thing, this election is likely to be decided, not on China, the Soviet Union and other foreign affairs issues, but on the domestic issues of jobs, prices, and wages. President Nixon no doubt has an advantage over any Demo-cratic candidate in the field of foreign affairs, and will be able to argue that he brought over half a million men back from Vietnam, ended the isolation of China, and negotiated a limited strategic arms agreement with the Soviet Union, but foreign affairs is not the presiding issue of this election, as it has been in the last three or four,

There is no longer the active fear of a major war among the people. The Soviet Union is still a surly mood, and is increasing its naval and missile power at an alarming rate, but it is preoccupied with China on its eastern frontier and is reaching limited accommodations with its shaking its fist at the world, but is talking peaceful co-exis-tence with the West and denying that it ever had any ambition to be a "superpower." Accordingly, the fewer the tensions and anxieties abroad, the more people are likely to turn to the serious problems at home.

Here the trends do not justify the confidence of the Republican leaders. The President will probably be going to the polls with a four-year budget deficit of over $90 billion, a devalued dollar, around 5 million unemployed, and widespread resentment over the

He will be able to claim that the mood of the country is a little celmer than it was a couple of years ago, but he can no longer blame the Democrats for the absence of law and order, as he did in 1968, and with a $90 billion deficit, he can scarcely scold the Democrats for "fiscal irresponsibility."

No doubt party allegiance has declined, but the Democrats are still out-registering the Republicans, and this is particularly true of the 12 million newly enfranchised voters between 18 and 21, who have been hard-hit by the economic recession and the inflation.

In addition, there are now over 20 million Americans 65 and over, who have suffered under the rising prices and early retirements, and if anything, the blacks are better organized, more numerous, and more Democratic poorly organized. For the moment, they don't quite know what to do with a President who has embraced the welfare state, the planned economy, wage and price controls, and most of the other favorite Democratic issues, including dramatic peace talks with the Communists in China and the Soviet Union.

Still, they have not lost their natural constituencies. The Republicans have managed to win only three of the last eight presidential elections, two of them on the popularity of Gen. Eisenhower, and the third in 1968 because the Democrats were fighting in the streets of Chicago over a war they could not win

Things are not quite so bad for them now. Muskie has slipped a bit by getting into an emo-tional row with William Loeb, the caustic publisher of the Manchester (N. H.) Union Leader, and he'll probably skid a little more after the Florida primary. even if he wins big in New Hampshire, but the tangle of contenders and primaries will eventually come down to a struggle between Muskie and Humphrey, and one of them will finally emerge to campaign mainly on the economic and social issues, where the Re-publicans are weakest.

Money Matters

By the end of the summer, money will not be the handicap it now is for the Democrats. They will still be broke, but organized labor, while divided, is rich and at the administration's handling of the economy, and uresidential elections are seldom won or lost on money slone.

Nixon is undoubtedly stronger now than he was at the beginning of the 1968 campaign, and as he demonstrated in China, he is very good at using the power of the presidency for political advantage. But he squeaked past Humphrey last time with only 43 percent of the vote, and there is little evidence that he has attained the kind of personal popularity Eisenhower used to overcome the strength of the Democrats on pocketbook issues. John Mitchell, who will run the Republican campaign, said this week that the only issue of the campaign will be "President Wixon and his record," but that record may not be good enough to win. For this country is in a restless and troubled mood these days, and unless Nixon can end the war and make substantial progress on winding down the prices and the unemployment, he could lose at home even while making progress abroad.

Wallace Tells Why He Runs As Democrat

By George C. Wallace

Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama was asked by The New York Times why he was running in the presidential primaries as a Democret. Here is his response:

MONTGOMERY Our govern ment was never intended to rule the people. Its function is to serve the people with vision and imagination and with abid ing concern for the people's han.

The American people are fed up with the interference of gop. ernment. They want to be left

For Rank-and-File

I run for president as a Dame. crat for those rank-and-file cirzens who seek a candidate responsive to the will of the people and not a candidate placed he fore them by blg-money interests and political power-brokers.

I run for president as a Democrat to assure our citizens of honest, enlightened and mature government by consent of the governed with the promise to bring into reality again those liberties assured to our citizens by our Founding Fathers and to meet the challenges of our times with realism and people-oriented

- My decision to seek the Democratic party nomination resulted from thousands of letters, calls and personal conversations with Democrats all across America They would like to nominate a candidate for the Democratic party more in tune with the real expressions of citizens.

In my judgment, this election offers a rare opportunity for rank-and-file citizens to start a grass-roots movement to take the Democratic party back unto themselves. It is a challenge to have again a real people's party.

Always a Democrat

All of my public service in all three branches of governmentlegislative, judicial and executive -has been as a Democrat. I was elected a legislator, a judge and twice governor as a Democrat. My late wife, Lurleen, was elected governor as a Democrat. My father was a Democratic chairman of his county governing body. My grandfather was a Democratic judge. My brother is a Democratic judge.

In 1948 I was elected a delegate to the Democratic National Convention. In 1956 I was again a delegate and served as chairman of the Southern delegation on the platform committee. In 1964 I received as much as 43 percent of the Democratic vote in Wisconsin, Indiana and Maryland in preferential presidential prime ries.

. In 1968 I was the nominee for president of a third party. I know the great obstacles and barriers of a candidacy on the third-party ticket. I desire only to do what is best for America. I believe that securing the Democratic party nomination will do more for the 10 million people who voted for me and all other Americans than anything else I can do. I simply do not believe the Democratic party can win in 1972 with any of the other candidates now in the field.

Ecology and Politics

By Anthony Lewis

French children's riddle about a pend with a water lily in it. The fily doubles in size every day. In 30 days it will cover the entire pond, killing the other creatures in it. The owner wants to avoid that, but he sees no hurry: He will cut the plant back when it covers half the pond. When will that be?

The enswer is the 29th day. He has one day to save his pond. The story is told in "The Limits to Growth," a report by a team of scientists to the Club of Rome, an international group concerened with the future of man and the earth. The report has just been published as a paperback book. It is the most fascinating and the most disturbing book I have read in a very long time. The hily pond indicates

Like the lily, man's impact on the earth is growing exponentially: doubling every so often. For example, the population curve is rising so fast that the world total now doubles about every 33 years. Industrial production is also growing exponentially, as are pollution and the demand for food and the use of mineral resources.

Earth Is Finite

And like the pond to the lily, there are limits to the growth of all these factors in human existence. The earth is finite.

The Club of Rome report, based on computer models, tries to explore where the limits are and what will happen when they are reached. It concludes that, if the present trends continue. "The limits to growth on this planet will be reached sometime within the next 100 years. The most probable result will be a rather sudden and uncontrollable decline in both population and industrial

That conclusion has already begun to arouse the sharpest controversy. Some economists and scientists consider the computer models inadequate, the analysis too simple.

The authors of the report-Dennis L. Meadows of MIT and others—would readily admit the inadequacy of this first effort to measure the whole trend of man's relationship with his environment. Their object is not to provide final answers now. It is to make the world realize there is a problem and start to think

The sense of earthly limits has begun to come into our consciousness without any need for a scientific report. We know that it is increasingly difficult to find a place to build power plants urgently needed in the United States. We know that the catch of ocean fish is dropping. We know how difficult it is to dispose of our industrial and household

The special value of this report

WASHINGTON.—There is a the truth ecologists have been trying to teach us: that the elements of life are interconnected, There is no easy way out when we approach a limit in one area. because anything we do to avoid the limit will have consequences elsewhere.

The most skeptical critics of ecological thinking recognize that we are rapidly approaching the limit of ordinary estimated oil reserves. The critics deal with that by saying that we shall simply get our oil from new scurces-say oil-shale rock.

Food Production

But massive efforts to extract oil from shale would have consequences. There would be a huge disposal problem, for example, and large amounts of new electric power would be required. What would fuel the generating plants—nuclear power? But the relatively few nuclear generators we have now are already creating such a problem of radioactive waste that the chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission has suggested rocketing it to the sun. Or consider food production.

The green revolution has allowed us to multiply crop yields, but people tend to forget that there aré costs—as always. Fertilizer must be used intensively, so much more has to be produced, and that takes energy. Fertilizer pollutes nearby streams as it runs off the land, and it gradually lowers the fertility of the soil. Then more capital has to be invested to produce the same cr and so on.

. Those who advocate economic growth as the sovereign remedy for our social ills ought at least to expose themselves to the Meadows report. If they did, they could no longer content themselves with the simple notion that ecological limits are only a matter of resources; for which substitutes can always be found. They would begin to consider resources together with food, pollution, population, industrial production: They would begin to understand how deceptive it is to think of a limitless Illy pond.

The Club of Rome says that the purpose of its report is to provoke thought, not despair. And the thinking cannot be left to the ecological enthusiasts. It would be quite wrong, intellectual. ly and morally, to suggest that resolution of the dilemma of economic growth be left to those who have identified it. The decisions required are political: They

O Pioneers!

One of the great goals of space research, shared with all religions in mankind's history, is to talk with higher beings. The plaque borne by Pioneer-10. (IHT, Feb 28-27), carrying mankind's greeting to an "intelligent and advanced civilization," is such an attempt. Sadly, the effort to keep the message, a drawing of a man and a woman, from being too explicit sounds quite a bit more typical of religion than science. Dr. Sagan may like to think that his wife's drawing will be the longest-lived work of man in history" but that can-not happen until the long-lived story of the Tower of Babel is no longer told.

ROBERT LIVERMORE. Copenhagen.

Why is the larger creature signaling and the smaller one looking lifeless? An allen civilization would probably reise this question after analyzing the spacecraft Ploneer-10's message plaque.

Why is the woman given a diffident role on this plaque's design? Moreover, since women represent at least 60 percent of "numankind," why isn't the woman also making the gesture of friendship?

Whether the oversight on the plaque is due to Linda Sagan, who originally designed the plaque, or to a committee at NASA, it reis its compelling exposition of years a misconception of woman's role and is incorrect in both figures not gesturing friendship. Therefore, the design of this plaque is a message distinctly from the decision-making committee at NASA's Ames Research Center in California and not from 'humankind" as it supposedly is and should be.

VIRGINIA HOWSAM.
Corsier Port, Switzerland.

The drawing of a naked man and woman on the spacecraft Ploneer produced an incident of censorship that proves puritanism still hangs over America like pollution. The original drawing of the nude woman was found by a bureaucrat at the space agency to be "a bit too explicit" and had to be "toned down considerably" by the artist, also a woman. Now there was a confrontation I wish I had overheard.

Anthony Lewis's recent articles (IHT Pebruary) suggesting that man should diseard the idea of economic growth have been very thought-provoking indeed. Rather than economic growth he proposes that man must conserve its logical growth which develope dwindling natural resources in order to avoid a natural calamity on earth.

VALLETTA, Mar h 3 (AP) --About 1,000 Maltese civilians and uniformed personnel of the three services were laid off today.

There is no work for them at the various services establishments due to the British withdrawal from Malta, which will be completed by March 17. The original deadline for withdrawal set by the British government was March 31, the day of expiration of the interim agreement, signed by Premier Dom Mintoff and Prime Minister Edward Heath last September.

Meanwhile, diplomatic activity continued in an effort to bring Mr. Mintoff and Britain's Defense Secretary, Lord Carrington, together again in a bid to halt the withdrawal and resume the talks on the future of the military base here which broke down in Rome four weeks ago.

Britain and NATO then made their final offer of £14 million annually for seven and a half years. Mr. Mintoff has demanded £18 million. As the withdrawal continues,

Mr. Walker's announcement fol-lowed one week of growing public anxiety over the finding of a potentially lethal deposit of cyanide in a dumpyard used by children at Nuneaton, Warwick-shire. Inquiries into the dumping of cyanide waste spread to other cities, with deposits uncovered in Coventry and Rugby.
"No society should tolerate a

. "The present law is totally inadequate to deter those guilty of cabinet minister's call to punish offenders with "an unlimited fine or five years imprisonment or both," was greeted with warm applause from members of Parliament.

For years Britain has fought contamination of the environ-ment with legislation at both the national and local levels. In 1970 it became the first major nation to establish a Department of the Environment, which seeks to protect the coast and countryside, preserve historic towns and monuments and control air, water and noise pollution.

The impact of the Clean Air Acts and anti-pollution measures has been marked. During the winter, average visibility in Lon-don was increased over the past 10 years from one mile to four miles. The Thames had been without fish for nearly a century. By 1968, some 40 different varieties had come back to the river.

Signalman Is Suicide After 2 Trains Crash

INGOLSTADT, Germany, March 3 (UPI)—A railway signalman committed suicide today in the wake of a train crash that resulted in a series of explosions and a huge fire that killed three persons, police said. The blaze occurred around midnight after two trains hauling petroleum products collided in central Ingoistadt. Railway employees this morning found the body of Willibaid Mayer, 50, lying near the tracks in the vicinity of the crash scene. Police said he had thrown himself in front of a train. He was on duty as signalman when the two trains collided.

Harvest Loss For Russians Is Put at 10%

By Robert G. Kaiser

MOSCOW, March 3 (WP) .- A harsh winter has destroyed about 24 million acres of winter wheat, winter barley and rye-10 percent of the Soviet Union's annual grain production-Western agricultural analysts said here today. Such losses are not uncommon and there is not yet a crisis, these analysts added. Bad harvests force the Russians to buy food abroad with hard currency, as they are doing this year, diverting it from other economic sectors. Disastrous harvests—like that of 1963—can have dramatic political consequences. as Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev discovered when he lost power abruptly in 1964.

This winter's troubles are attributed to extremely cold temperatures and a light snowfall in Russia and the Ukraine.

The Soviet government has openly acknowledged difficulties and a series of meetings were held on the subject here last month. At the most important of these, the Communist party general secretary, Leonid Brezhnev, addressed agricultural of-ficials from all over the Soviet

Details Kept Secret

Today's issue of Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, carries a dispatch from Moldavia predicting "intensive" efforts by farmers this spring to make up for winter damage.

A good summer harvest could compensate for the winter's losses. according to Western agricultural analysts. They note that the winter of 1968-69 was apparently more severe than this year's and a good summer harvest in 1969 more than made up for it.

Even a good recovery this spring and summer would leave the prospects for fulfilling the current five-year plan "real glum," as one Western source put it. Success in the plan, which covers 1971-75, depended on good harvests every year, and last year's figures were only fair, this expert noted.

King Plans Caretaker Regime For Morocco Until Elections

RABAT, Morocco, March 3 (AP: -King Hassan II of Morocco announced today he will shortly dissolve the government and appoint a caretaker regime to prepare legislative elections scheduled to be held three months from now.

In his annual speech from the throne on the 11th anniversary of his coming to power, the king called on the opposition parties to participate in the transition government "so that it will be a government of reconciliation between all the political tendencies in the country."

The king's announcement followed the passage of a new constitution which increases from one third to two thirds the number of legislators elected to parliament by universal suffrage. The king had said earlier that the constitution, supported by 987 percent of the voters in Wednesday's referendum, would be the start of a process in which

The 3,700-ton missile-firing submarine is being battered by 20foot seas and 40-knot winds. There was also snow and fog in the area, 800 miles northeast of Newfoundland.

Defense Department spokesmen said Russian vessels trying to aid the crippled submarine had been unsuccessful in establishing a tow. There are nue Soviet ships in

The king said, "We hope with all our heart that this 'new' government will be the first of its hind in our country, that is, government in the service of the general interest, and above all a government whose members will be an example of accord and national reconciliation.

The king said "it is possible to foresee" that the new government will be made up in its majority of technicians largely outside politics. Its major task, he said, will be to supervise a number of elections—in regional and other local organizations-before preparing the legislative election.

A Moroccan source said it is expected that formation of a new government will take from one to two weeks. The job is that of the king. He retains this privilege as well as that of dissolving governments and parliaments initiating constitutional amendments and running the country alone in an emergency under the terms of the new constitution.

'Make Believe' Assailed

While he asked for the participation of the opposition—if had urged that Moroccans abstain from voting in the constitutional referendum-Hassan attacked those who "make believe that the economic and social situation in the country is deteriorating."

The king also had a warning for the men with whom the government does business. Referring to trials under way involving former government members. Hassan said, "We hope that all the men to whom the state gives responsibilities or with whom it makes agreements or transactions will learn a useful lesson from these trials and convic-

LONDON, March 3 (IPT) -After 12 years, productions in 45 countries, television and film versions, Harold Pinter's "The Caretaker" seems a little overexposed. There is little left to say about it, except that it remains his most accessible play.

It comes up as fresh as ever in its first London revival, a fine one, at the Mermald, being excellently directed by Christon Morahan and as well acted by John Hurt, Jeremy Kemp. and Leonard Rossiter. The production makes it seem less portentous and much funnier than usual, perhaps because we have grown accustomed to Finter's seedy world, full of hidden or half-realized menace.

The oddity has gone out of the junk-filled attic where Mick (John Hurt) broods or dreams of middle-class comforts, cork-tiled floors and Formica tables, while his blank-minded brother Aston (Jeremy Kemp) offers a bed to the stinking, servile tramp Davies trial, opens at a new small theorem Rossiter). theater, the Soho Poly on Riding Mr. Rossiter makes the most of

Opera in London: A 'Dutchman' For the Ears, Not the Eyes STAFF SELECTION & SERVICES S.A. By Henry Pleasants

d'Aguesseau, Paris 8.

ONDON, March 3 (IET).—The Royal Opera's revival of "The Flying Dutchman" is a delight for the ear, a trial for the eye. It is the 1966 Clifford Williams production, with sets by Sean Kenny, not heard here since 1987, and now entirely recast, with the veteran Hans Schmidt-Isserstedt replacing Georg Solti as the conductor.

Donald McIntyre, a New Zealander, has the ideal Dutchman voice -dark, strong, with reserves of power for the big moments, and capable of being scaled down for the occasional tender episodes.

Catarina Ligendza, similarly, seems predestined for Senta, so much so, indeed, that one notes with wonderment, even alarm, that she is now also the Bayreuth Brünnhilde. Hers is one of those clear, Scandinavian voices, more accurate than opulent, and managed with skill, discretion and musical intelligence.

Michael Langdon, who is also the company's admirable Baron Ochs, is as fine a Daland as one is likely to hear in a lifetime. The way he matched the tone of Daland's introduction of the Dutchman to Senta in the second act to the Meyerbeerian music—which Wagner conceived so brilliantly to contrast Daland's naive materialism with the spiritual and mystical preoccupations of Senta and the Dutchman-was, quite simply, a theater masterpiece. If the sum of these and other parts, including the orchestra and the splendid singing of the Royal Opera Chorus, failed to make a memorable evening, it was clearly because not even such protagonists could quite surmount the obstacles of the production, part old-fashioned grand opera, partly arty and pretentious neo-Bayreuth. The two quayside scenes are built around a rait rather than a ship. Not a mast or sail in sight. All is done—or not done—with lights and shadows. Well, this might still do. But when the curtain goes up on the second act to reveal that same raft, precariously tilted, as the Spinnstube in Daland's home, one can only shake one's head in disbelief. It all stems, of course, from Wieland Wagner. One wonders what he would have said. He had a salty vocabulary. -William Mann, in The Times (of London) today, speaks defensively of "those Wagnerites so devoted to theatrical realism that they still sniff at Sean Kenny's stylized settings." What occurred to this un-repentant realist was the title of the Heinrich Heine novel upon which Wagner drew for "The Flying Dutchman"; "Memoirs of Herr von Schnabelewopski." The name probably doesn't mean anything. But it sounds about right as a rude commentary on that Spinnstube.

The Art Market

Cranach, Gold-Box Auctions Are Signs of Paris Revival

By Souren Melikian

his wife-by the German Renaisanctioned at Palais Galliéra in: Paris, 9 p.m., Tuesday.

The two portraits, from a private French collection, have been in the same family for nearly half a century. The experts estimate that they will sell for 400,000 to 800,000 francs. Far too modest, in my view, but there is a lack of interest among private collectors for portraits in general, and for portraits of the Renaiseance era in particular, But the value of such pictures to a museum is inestimable and the bidding should be fierce.

Another important sale next week that of 10 gold boxes from the 18th century, of a quality seldom seep at auction will take place Thursday at 2:30 p.m. at

These sales and others in the last 10 months suggest that Paris is regaining its standing in the international art market, contradicting the trend of the last decade, which has seen the French capital running a poor second to London.

Last season, from October, 1970,through July, 1971, most of the major impressionist and modern paintings were sold in London or New York, through Parke-Bernet, a subsidiary of the British-owned firm of Sotheby's. All the really great works by Renaissance and classical painters were auctioned by Sotheby's and Christie's of Lon-

Swing Toward Paris

The first indication of a swing toward Paris came last June with the D. David-Weill sale of French classical silver. Several factors combined to make it a success. It was a major collection sold, not for speculative reasons, but to settle an estate. Furthermore, the man who helped create the collection over a period of 40 or so years, expert Jacques Helit, who has an international reputation, handled the sale with the well-known auctioneer Etienne Ader. The Parisian experts with international status are a major asset to the French market.

However favorable the circumstances, the sale went well beyond anybody's expectations. To take a single example: a unique box made by Juste-Aurèle Meissonnier, the 18th-century creator of rococo design in France, had been estimated at about 400,000 francs. but it made twice that. A second David-Weill sale of French classical silver in November confirmed that the French market could rise to fantastic heights.

Thursday, Paris will be reaping its reward for the June and November successes when the first important sale of 18th-century gold boxes to be held for many years will be conducted by Etienne Ader, Jean-Louis Picard ly referred to in the catalogue as "Mr. C," is, in fact, an international businessman. He also happens to be one of the top collectors in his field. He knows his art as well as the art market—from an investment point of view. Having decided to part with 10 boxes-

Paris-not London or New York.

His decision is all the more complimentary to Paris as an art-market center, for eight of the 10 boxes were bought outside France. One was acquired

While it may reasonably be argued that Paris is a better market for French gold boxes than London, Russian silver is not more sought after here than there. But, as Mr. C, told me, such sales as the one next Thursday are attended by international buyers anyway and Parls is likely to attract more

Apparently, several other important vendors feel the same way. The two portraits by Cranach will be sold by Maurice Rheims and René-George Laurin Tuesday. Works by the German muster (1472-1553) are rarely seen at auction, and Cranach's stature makes his paintings eagerly sought after.

Rut the identity of the two subjects and the familiarity of the works multiply the interest in them five or six-fold. As early 1900, E. Flechsig discussed them in his monograph on the artist, using them as illustrations. In 1932, the two world authorities on the painter, M.J. Friedländer and J. Rosenberg, further authenticated the pictures by discussing them in their monumental work "Die Gemälde von Lucas Cranach."

These two important sales would seem to indicate that Paris is winning the battle against London, But this is not quite the case, judging by a recent setback caused by the lack of coordination between auctioneers and emperts. The collection of Ciunese archaic bronzes sold at Sotheby's last Wednesday belonged to the late D. David-Welli, It so happens that France has, in this held. an expert of vast emperience, Guy Portier. But someone failed to play this trump card. So the last word has not been said and some fierce shirmishes are Luther's wife, painted in 1526.

The outcome of the gold-box auction will be of particular in-terest. For the last few years, the market for them has been steadily rising by about 10 per-cent annually. It is not subject to erratic variations because the market is closely followed by invesiors. Because of hallmarks and other scholarly guidelines of a stylistic nature, and because of the appeal of gold as such, it is one of the safest fields-ideal for investment. Fakes are comparatively easy to detect, even those 18th-century imitations made by Austrians and Saiss, or the later imitations made in France in the Louis-Philippe era, Investors seldom hold back in this field, as do in others, and next doubtless yet to come.

Irving Marder

The Prolific Progeny of James Joyce

PARIS (IHT).—The man who killed the 19th century" was the tribute of that connoisseur of death and desolation, T. S. Eliot. "The great poet of a new phase of the human consciousness," said Edmund said Edmund V. ilson, America's great critic. They were talking, of course, about James Joyce. whose magnum opus, "Ulysses." was published just over a half-century ago, ("After a frantic last-minute race against time, finished copies were finally placed in his hands on Feb. 2, 1922, his 40th birthday." John Gross noted in hi. recent book about Joyce")

A cartoon in The New Yorker a little later depicted a furtive Allerican matron in a Paris bookshop saying to a clerk, "Avez-vou; 'Ulysses'?" It was not until 1934, after Judge Woolsey's ruling that the book was not pernographic, that a New York publishing house was able to bring out a legal edition. In the interim there had been a steady bootleg trade in "Ulysses," there was also a pirated American

Not all of the big birds had taken part in the joyful chorus that celebrated the original publication of "Ulysses." Here, for example, is the verdict of E. M. Forster: "'Ulysses' is a dogged attempt to cover the universe with mud, an inverted Victorianism, an attempt to make coarseness and dirt succeed where sweetness and light failed . . . " In short, "an epic of grubbiness and distilusion . . ."

Sylvia Beach

Joyce had begun planning "Ulysses" as early as 1914 in Trieste, where he taught English in a Berlitz school. At the outbreak of World War I the Joyce family moved to Zurich, returned to Trieste after the war. in 1919. "In the summer of 1920, urged on by [Ezral Found," Gross recounts, "he decided to settle in Paris,"

In the United States the Little Review had begun to serialize "Ulysses," though Joyce had not yet finished the book. But after the New York Society for the Prevention of Vice filed a complaint, the Little Review was forced to suspend its series. It was then that Sylvia Beach, the American expatriate who ran a famous Poris bookshop called Shakespeare and Company, ento publish "Ulysses" under the imprint of her bookshop and Joyce promptly agreed: It had become clear by then that the book "had no chance of finding a publisher in England or America."

The basic problem, of course, was a three-letter word: Sex. By breaking the most jealously guarded of literary tabons," Gross says, "he gave notice that the entire range of experience was grist to his epic: the man who Was prepared to use four-letter words in print would stop at nothing, or so it seemed in How far has explicitness in fiction traveled in the 50 years since "Ulyaces"? Says Gross:

"... By comparison with what we have come to take for granted in recent years. Joyce's 'outspokenness' now looks rather tame. As a shock-tactic it belongs to a moment which has passed, and which can never be repeated." It seemed instructive, after reading this, to turn to the current reviews of one of today's explicit" novelists, Hubert Selby jr., author of the controversial book "Last Exit to Erocklyn." The Times Literary Supplement, reviewing Selby's new novel, "The Room," said: "...The bludgean of sadism is wielded so excessively and with such force that the reader is soon clubbed into insensibility, incapable of registering much beyond the repelitive, horrific blood and sperm-letting." The book concerns the "fantasies of revenge on the two arresting officers" of a man in a cell awaiting trial.)

The New Statesman's review of "The Room," however, said that although "by any count the book is ugly, unpleasant and disturbing . . . in its entirety the novel comes through triumphantly as a work of art, though not necessarily unblemished. As a contemporary exploration of a psychotic personality it is certainly remarkable."

Last week's issue of the Times Literary Supplement, in the seventh article of a series titled The Abuses of Literacy," also offers some pertinent observations by Alan Ryan on the subjects of obscenity and pornog-"We may cheerfully raphy. agree," he says, "that the consumer is already as deprayed and corrupted as he is likely to become; what the [British] law the seller and the buyer [from] further weakening the moral consensus against which their activities offend."

He adds: "On this view, if we want to know whether something is obscene, we need only ask the jury to consult its feelings when it is presented with the article complained of... In many ways, this is much the best account of obscenity: The obscene is what shocks some specifiable social group." Ryan goes on to say, however that "it leaves too much at the mercy of judge and jury" to decide whether a given work has enough aesthetic value to outweigh its offensiveness. "More to the point." Ryan says, "is to defend the right to buy and sell things of no conceivable assthetic merit . . . If we defend this right, we defend the rights of the serious artist too, and without the embarrassing charade whereby lawyers, judges and juries are forced to act as the arbiters of public taste." We have indeed gone a long way in the half-century since 1922, when Molly Bloom ended her carnal reverie (which was really, as John Gross points out, even longer ago, since "Ulyzses" is set in 1904). For at least one reader. Molly still seems truer to life than the tall, reedy, half-blind, somehow bloodless, worddrunk fellow who was her creator. And yet, to give the clever devil his due, he must have existed, for his progeny, not

Giscard Tells U.S. to Solve Dollar Woes

Speaks at Blue-Ribbon Businessmen's Parley

By Carl Gewirtz VERSAILLES, France, March 3 (IHT) - French Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing warned the United States today to drop its indifference to international monetary problems or face the consequences.

In a huncheon address to American and European busmessmen meeting in this city of historic second; the minister said that the Dec. 18 monetary agree-ment has left the world "disappointed and perplexed." None of the expected results from that agreement-neither the official devaluation of the dollar nor the reflow of several billion dollars back to the United States—has taken place so far, he said.

He warned that if the uncertainties concerning the dollar persist, the same conditions as existed last spring at the height of the dollar crisis could resp-

But, he stated, a fundamental change has occurred since last year. "The political reactions will be very different. The era of European currencies floating or revaluing is over. The era of massive dollar purchases central banks is finished."

Capital Warning

To avoid a showdown, he said that "the United States must take measures to slow the flight of capital." Otherwise, he warned, more distasteful and more damaging" steps will be taken by other governments to keep those dollars out of their markets.

He also called on the United States to at the least—under-take a commitment to restore the convertibility of the dollar, even if such a return be only gradual.

"Europe," he said, "is prepared costs of convertibility." He cited, for example, the agreement between leading central banks after the devaluation of sterling in 1967 to guarantee Britain's long-term

For its part, the blue-ribbon conference of businessmen agreed on the need for the "early re ration of the convertibility of the dollar." This would "serve to reduce the danger of the general imposition of controls over trade and capital movements." They called for "the greatest possible freedom of trade and capital

Banal Communiqué

By and large, the communiqué multinational investment problems facing European and U.S. businessmen was one of platitudes. with little reference to the very real problems that divide official negotiators of the two trading blocs.

On trade, the communiqué declared that "we agree on certain broad principles" including: "The importance of increasing worki trade, the gradual elimination of tariff and non-tariff barriers and that the principle of comparative economic advantage should guide the structure of trade."

Notably missing was any reference to a mutual commitment to negotiate existing trade problems.

On the very touchy subject of agricultural trade it said: "We recommend that in the current and forthcoming negotiations (between Washington and Brussels), account should be taken of the necessity for assuring both equitable income and market opportunities for farmers."

On multinational investments, the communiqué noted that "there was agreement... stressing the benefits of multinational investment and on the related necessity to afford it the widest possible freedom."

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Montedison Gross Revenue Up ;

Montecatini Edison reports gross revenue in 1971 rose 4.1 percent but the parent company scored gains of only 23 percent from 1970. Gross revenue rose to 2,140 billion lire in 1971, the parent company providing 621 billion of that figure. The chemical sector led with gross revenue of 543.9 billion lire, a 14.4 percent increase. Textiles held second place with 349 billion lire, a 10.6 percent increase.

Japan Seen Extending Steel Curbs

The Japanese steel industry will announce a three-year extension of its voluntary control of exports to the United States this month, Nippon Steel Corp. says. The company says the industry is likely to limit the annual rate of increase in steel exports to 25 percent. Japan last year shipped 6.3 million tons of steel to the United States, 5.9 percent more than in 1970. The industry has been voluntarily regulating its exports to the United States since 1969 and the gain was larger than the maximum 5 percent increase it

U.S. Farm Exports Seen Rising The U.S. Agriculture Department has new figures showing farm exports this year may soar to a record value of more than $7.8 billion despite Nixon administration claims that dock strikes are causing a sharp cuthack. Department sources say farm exports in January, the latest month tabulated, totaled $770 million, or about 15 percent more than a year ago. Consequently, there is "serious speculation" that total farm exports for the entire fiscal year ending June 30 will ch and probably surpass the $7.8 billion record in 1970-71, the sources say. Agriculture Secretary Earl L Butz criticized striking dock workers this winter for tying up farm shipments. He predicted the export value would be down $400 million to $500 million from the record high last

BLMC Says Coal Strike Hits Profit

Lord Stokes, chairman and managing director of British Leyland Motor Corp., says first-half results "will be seriously affected" by the recent coal strike in Britain. However, he told the annual general meeting, "subject to national conditions and to achieving continuity of production, the dividend for the current year on the increased capital will be not less than that for the 1970-71 period," Lord Stokes said that last month BLMC's share of the British car market was 42.4

GM Chairman Plans Japan Visit

Richard C. Gerstenberg, chairman of General Motors, is to arrive in Tokyo on March 16 for three-day business visit, Isuzu Motor Co. reports. Mr. Gerstenberg will meet with Isuzu officials to discuss establishment of a joint venture in Japan to produce gas turbine engines with Isuzu, C. Itoh and Kawasaki Heavy Indus-

Argentina Receives Loan Offers

Argentina has received offers of credit totalling $940.8 million from private and official banks in Europe, the United States and Canada, central bank president Carlos Brignone told a press conference. Mr. Brignone led an Argentine financial mission on a tour of the United States, Britain, France, West Germany, Switzerland, Italy and Spain between Jan 30 and Feb. 26. His statement was the first official acknowledgement of the amount sought to boister Argentina's dwindling foreign reserves. The Argentine balance-of-payments deficit last year was $570 million.

Minimum Margin Requirement Raised

Stock Boom Worries Japanese Officials

Japan's monetary authorities are becoming increasingly concerned about the high degree of speculation involved in a sharp increase in Japanese stock prices since the yen was revalued in December.

To counter the trend, the Ministry of Finance yesterday tightened basic margin requirements for the first time since 1968. In recent days, it has also had consultations with representatives of leading securities firms concerning other methods of damping speculative pressures.

"Japanese stock markets are overheated, with prices pushed up to unrealistic levels considering the recessionary trend of the economy," an official at the Finance Ministry said.

Despite the recession, the close-ly-watched 225-share index, charting the movements of stock prices of most well-known concerns, reached a record 3,027.49 on Feb. 28 before easing slightly in recent sessions in expectation of tighter margin requirements. It closed at 3,015.14 Friday.

The Feb. 28 peak represents a gain of 546.8 points, or 22 percent, from the index level on Dec. 18, 1971, the last trading day before the yen was revalued 16.9 percent against the dollar.

The Tokyo Stock Exchange index, which measures the market value of all shares listed on the first section of the exchange, likewise rose 20.5 percent from Dec. 18 to Feb. 28.

High Ratio Noted One reason Japanese authorities believe the market advance has been overdone is the high

TOKYO, March 3 (AP-DJ) - ratio of stock piles to company

Japanese Protest Against Imports Of Cheap Textiles

TOKYO, March 3 (NYT) .-Japanese textile companies, unyear's mandatory government re-strictions on exports to the United States, are complaining about cheap import competition here and asking the government for countermeatures.

Clothing and other cheap imports from low-wage countries such as China, South Korea, Taiwan and Hong Kong are causing concern.

The ministry of international trade and industry confirmed the reports of complaints from some of the smaller textile groups, but a spokesman said there were no plans for countermeasures. Some manufacturers had reportedly asked for a system of "orderly imports.

Japan's textile imports last year totaled $327 million, not a very large figure in terms of Japanese trade. But some small companies noted that the figure had jumped 24 percent in one year. One factor was a 50 per-cent reduction in textiles tariffs announced last August to create a preferential rate for exports of eveloping nations. Government officials said there was not much to be done about the cheap imports, since official policy is to encourage them.

because Japanese companies operate with an average debt equity ratio of four to one, about the reverse of the situation in other countries. What this means is that per-share profit of Japanese concerns is much more volatile than their foreign counterparts. warranting a lower PE rating because of the higher risk involved. To cool the stock markets, the Pinance Ministry resterday raised its minimum margin requirement to 80 percent from 30 percent. This means a purchaser must put up at least 60 percent col-lateral in order to buy a share, and can borrow funds to cover the rest of the price.

The main reason Tokyo stock prices are advancing is the high degree of liquidity in the econ-omy. The Bank of Japan has successively cut its discount rate to a post-war low during the course of the past 20 months and the Finance Ministry has pumped money into the economy through public works spending.

However, business conditions look so bad that companies have chosen not to employ these funds to expand their production facilities or to build their inventories.

Brokers say the companies are increasingly employing the funds to speculate in the stock market because they cannot think of any other use for them.

Another factor aiding the market advance is a sudden renewed interest in Japanese securities by overseas investors. After selling on balance for several months in anticipation of an adverse impact of the yen revaluation on Japan's economy, foreigners suddenly turned bullish in February. The securities industry estimates the foreigners purchased a net $27 million of Japanese stock last month, a sharp reversal

To Rise by 12% This Year NEW YORK, March 3 (Reuters .-- U.S. corporations now expect their 1972 profits before taxes to rise 12 percent to a record total of $89.8 billion compared with $80.5 billion last year, according to McGrzw Hill Publishing Co.'s seventh annual survey of corporate prefit trends The upward trend is anticipated by more than 80 percent of the companies surveyed and only 11 percent expect profits to decline, while 7 percent expect no change. Nearly 60 percent of the corporations that answered expect higher profit margins this year. Only 20 percent expect them to decline and 22 percent see no change. 'Modest Advance'

The 12 percent anticipated rise in pre-tax profits is in line with current economic forecasts which point to "a modest advance" of economic growth this year. Doug-las Greenwald, McGraw Hill's chief economist, said.

He noted that profits are 'now seen as continuing a two-year upward course." If realized, it will be the first time since 1966 that profits have risen in successive years. If expectations indicated in survey materialize, 1372 should be a good year for corporations, the economy in general and capital investment in particular, Mr. Greenwald seid.

The survey shows non-manufacturing companies on the average to expect a 12 percent profit growth this year and manufacturers 11 percent.

Every major industry expects profits to be up in 1972, with gains ranging from 23 percent for steel in manufacturing to 4 percent for that catch-all group, "other nondurables," the survey Showed.

Non-ferrous metals, transportation equipment manufacturers, other than autos and aerospace, anticipate a 20 percent gain. Acrospace, food and beverage manufacturers anticipate only 5

U.K. Stock Marts Vote to Link Up

LONDON, March 3 (NYT).-The London Stock Exchange announced today that its members yesterday seemed to indicate that had approved by a vote of 2.153 to 442 a plan to amalgamate with the six provincial exchanges now operating in the United King-dom and the Republic of Ireland. The poll was a key step in a plan that will lead in a few years to the creation of a single national securities market in Though the plan has the unanimcus support of the London ex-change's governors, the outcome of the poll had been uncertain. At a spersely-attended meeting of members on Tuesday, the plan did not achieve a majority of 75 percent needed to amend the exchange's rules. The governors then decided to poll all 3.500 members. with the results announced to-

The credit does not expire until March 31, 1973, but it must be extended before the end of next month. If not, it will be due in the then-current 12-month period and must be counted as a current liability instead of a long-term debt. That means it would be charged against current assets on the balance sheet, reducing Pan Am's capital below what is required by other loan agreements and potentially forcing the company into reorganization.

In the long run, all observers agree, the company can look forward to clearer skies only if it gets a tight rein on its expenses.

Rapid Rise Predicted for U.K. Economy

But Official Warns

Against Over-Optimism

By Michael Stern LONDON, March 3 (NYT).--Sir John Patridge, president of the Eritish Confederation of Industry, predicted today a period of rapid expansion for the British economy accompanied by a rise in living standards and a reduction in unemployment.

But he warned that "there is no cause for any kind of rosy glow," and asserted that the seven-week coal miners strike this winter, which crippled inoffs, had produced a national mood that he found "rather jumpy, unsure of itself and fearful perhaps that even greater disunity is around the next co-ner."

Sir John, who besides leading the confederation also is chair-man of the Imperial Tobacco Group, told a meeting of industrial directors that the principal factors giving the economy a good potential for growth were

O A substantial balance of paymants surplus. O Under-utilized capacity in

m. n. industries. O A large reserve of under-❸ Considerable technological stringth. O Access to a broad, strong continental market when Britain enters the European Economic Community next January. "Taking a'l these factors into account," he said, "we should be better set than we have been for many years past for a period of sustained growth."

Sir John listed two key require-ments for the takeoff of the economy: Continued restraint on the rate of inflation and a more successful communication between the government and the people of the aims of anti-inflation policy.

good novels about sex again.

And it's about time. Before the 'sexual revolution," there were, of course, good novels on the theme but they treated it in a more or less classical way, you might say. Then the courts open-ed Pandora's box and every other novelist started to unbutton himself or herself. The trouble was, though, that they were virgins at this sort of thing and went at it clumsily. Readers were subjected to a good deal of boasting; to more than they might have wished of Krafft-Ebing's "Psychopathia Sexualis" and Gray's "Anatomy"; to sex served up as meaninglessly as meals con-sumed by the characters. This was the heyday of the "polymorphously perverse," and readers who were not particularly hung up on it passively accepted it, as they have learned to accept so many other novelties of contemporary life.

DEOPLE are beginning to write

Now, after a preliminary shaking-down period, novelists are gaining perspective. They're realizing that the new freedom They're the sexual revolution has created is not simply quantitative, but qualitative too. It's as if they're suddenly recognizing, at this late date, what a pregnant metaphor sex is. Freud must be smiling in

In "Odd Girl Out," Elizabeth Jane Howard takes a standard sexual situation one surprising step further-thus making it "new"-and then still another step, equally unexpected, to raise it above the level of the merely new. The first surprise—or "twist," if you insist—in a novel about sex is almost a cliché by now. We've already discovered that the unpredictable is predictable when there is passion, so she gives us that and then brilliantly goes beyond it.

Edmund and Anne Cornhill are happily married and have enjoyed 10 years of extraordinary sexual pleasure by "warping against each other," as a young poet recently put it. He has had no previous experience and she only a single very unhappy one: They are deeply grateful to each other for turning their respective weaknesses into strengths. Edmund's father had been briefly married to a wealthy man-eater, and Edmund remembers her with affec-tion because she treated him better than she did his father. Now his ex-stepmother wants Edmund and Anne to take care of Arabella, her daughter by another marriage, until she can find someone to marry her off to. Though she is 22, Arabella is at once a child and as old as the in Botticelli's "Primavera" would look if that lady too had just had an abortion. She arrives, pale and still bleeding, at the Cornhills' and tries, with all the wiles she has acquired in 22 years of surviving without love, to make them love her. She doesn't want to upset them, just to be included by them in their happiness. It won't diminish your pleasure in the least to know that Arabella sleeps with Edmund and that he is "blasted with ecstasy" right out of his happy security. Nor is it cheating to sell you that she does the same for Anne.

What makes "Odd Girl Out such a special novel is the fact that all this is most neturally managed, most convincing. Given circumstances, you can't imagine it coming out any other way. There is a fine scene in which Edmund, away on a busi ness trip, tries to write Arabella love letter, the kind of lette that he should have been writing 20 years earlier, and that the compulsive neatness of his min now renders impossible. home. Anne and Arabella are having a kind of puttering. ground - the - garden-and-kitchen affair, in which they go from making preserves to making love. Anne admires Arabella's small breasts and Arabella is fascinated by Anne's large ones.

Miss Howard, by the way, is married to Kingsley Amis, who has just written an equality original and unconventional novel about young and middle-aged sex. One cannot help thinking what an interesting life they must have together.

NEW YORK, March 3 (NYT). -With her flowing shoulderlength blond hair, pretty facial features and tall, shapely figure, Laurie Barr easily qualifies as one of the new "golden girls" in women's track and field.

"When I first started running." Miss Barr recalled recently, "the other girls used to tease me and laugh at me because I was so uncoordinated. They'd choose up relays and everybody would say, 'Okay, last pick, who gets Barr?' No more. With the score at 6-5 in Pasarell's favor in the third-set tiebreaker, the top-seeded Laver hit an overhead smash which had Pasarell lunging. He managed 2 high return, which Laver smashed backhanded into the net. In other matches, Ismael el-Shafei of Egypt beat John Newcombe of Australia, 6-4, 6-0; Australia's Ken Rosewall ousted Frank Froebling of Fort Lauderdale. Fla., 6-1, 6-2; Britain's Roger Taylor eliminated Bob Mark Cox of Britain beat Marty Riessen of Evanston, III., 6-3, 3-6, Argentine with Indian blood, looks romantically tough.

This will be Monzon's second appearance in Rome and only his third outside South America. Fifteen months aga, he took the litle from Benyonuti by knocking out the Italian hero in the 13th round. Last year in Monte Carlo he stopped Benvenuti in the third round.

Both times, he fought for Rodolfo Sabbatini, an influential Italian boxing promoter.

for two reasons: He doesn't shy eway from street fights and that hasn't made the police too happy, and money in Argentina does funny things and docsn't encourage visits from foreigners. Griffith's Trip

Emile Griffith went to Buenos Aires at the end of last year for a bout which he eventually lost in the 14th round to the chempion. But that wasn't all he lost. As his manager Gil Clancy puts it: "When we got to Euenos Aires there were something like a 100 pesos to the dollar; when we left, there were about 1,000." And for good measure, there was recently meat rationing in the country and the promoters had to smuggle meat to Griffith's hotel room.

Monzon is an overwhelming favorite to retain his title against the soft-spoken, shy Moyer, but he must also put on a good performance. If not, he may quickly learn you have had no trouble up until this week?" "Right," I replied. "We watched his arrival at Andrews Air Porce Base loud and clear in living color."

"Maybe it's in the tube," Mr. Cury said.
What would a TV tube have to do with it?" I asked.

"Well, what happens is that when these tubes are installed they emit a very strong Nixon signal. But as time goes on the filament wears thin, the tube gets weaker and weaker. On some of the older sets, people can't get Nixon at all. But this is a fairly new one, and you should be able to receive an image of Nixon even if it's only a shadow of him-

Mr. Cury checked the tube and shook his head. "It's not there. Maybe there is something wrong with your horizontal adjuster. On some sets when Nixon starts facing from the screen the trouble can be found with the horizontal dial. Tell me, the last time you saw Nixon, was he standing up or lying down?" "I think he was standing up,"

"Then maybe it's the vertical dial." Mr. Cury worked for three hours on the back of the set while we all waited nervously for him to fix it. Finally, he turned it on again. We got Dick Cavett, Johnny Carson, Perry Mason, and an old Wallace Beery movie. But still no Nixon.

Former fashion photographer Jerry Schatzberg with Kitty Winn, on location for his second film, "Panie in Needle Park."

Jerry Schatzberg And the American Dream

DARIS (IHT).—Dressed in a sort of baroque backwoodsman style-frizzy hair aspiring to an Afro but not making it, jeans stuffed into tall brown boots, Jerry Schatzberg, the director and former Vogue photographer, has been in Paris, where his first film, "Puzzle of a Downfall Child." got excellent reviews.

"Puzzle," which stars Faye Dunaway in a brilliant portrayal of a devastated and neurotic 1950s fashion model and which was written by Adrian Joyce (Carol Eastman), got short shrift in the United

"The woman critics hated it, they don't like to see a woman so vulnerable," Mr. Schatcherg says. "Rolling Stone loved it. Judith Crist sort of said, How dare you. you fashion poof, come into my world of cinema'"

Schatzberg dared by giving up his very successful fashion photographer's career two years before "Puzzle" was even set: 'If you're a fashion photographer you have to be fashionable. If you're out of it for two years, you're not fashionable." Having burned his bridges, he had the good sense to use the fashion world that he knew so well as the background for his

All of Us

"The film was a tremendous catharsis. It allowed me to say things I've thought, using things I remember and talking about the eternal victim." Schatzberg does not want his film to be considered simply the story of an aging model: his heroine, he says, is all of us.

"Lou is everybody, everybody is susceptible to that kind of downfall, we're all striving to get something we're told we should be after.

"Puzzle of a Downfall Child" was followed by "Panic in Needle Park," a drug drama that Schatzberg brought to the last Cannes Festival.

"I personally am getting a little paranoid about people walking out of my films all depressed," Schatzberg admits. "My own feeling is we're all victims. I had to get that out. I'm deep down a romantic, I would like to do love stories."

Schatzberg agrees that he would have to leave the New York area to do a romantic love story. His current project, which he is working on with writer Terry Southern, is a film of "A Cool Million," based on the 1934 Nathanael West story.

"It's very political, it's about the innocence of somebody being involved in a fascist build-up without knowing it exists. Even the people involved in it don't know. We've changed one aspect. It's a Communist who kills the hero in the book, we've changed it to a fascist killing him accidentally because we do kill ourselves. We do kill ourselves," Schatzberg repeated, "look at ecology."

In the fashion world, Jerry Schatzberg did many photographic portraits. Working with his subjects helped prepare him to work with actors.

"You have to make them relax establish a rapport. One of the worst pictures I ever took was of Angela Lansbury, whom I admire. I was late, there was no time to sit and rap, and she hates being photographed. She was nervous I didn't know what to talk about, it was a terrible pic-

-he's always thinking. The Beatles didn't work out—they weren't cooperative."

Jerry Schatzberg came to Vogue via the Bronx, Queens and the family fur business, which he was put into after school. "I hated it. I used to take two-hour lunches and look in the windows of photography shops. I don't know why, but they were close to my work and they took me out of that world.

"When I was married with two kids and not enough money, I was offered a job selling baby pictures door to door. Then I went into business with a relative of my ex-wife, selling venetian blinds. I'd put the blinds in the trunk of the car and go off to Jersey City to watch the burlesque

First Camera

"I never owned a camera until six months after my first son was born. After the door-to-door baby pictures job, I took snapshots and joined a camera club. I was nowhere. The first time I started to think sensibly as a photographer was when I was working for a photographer and I took a course, Brodovich's course, which I think every professional photographer has taken."

A French critic has suggested that in "Puzzle of a Downfall Child" and "Panic in Needle Park" Jerry Schatzberg has been showing the American Dream and what has happened to it. Schatzberg doesn't disagree:

"I want to wake people up. The dream itself doesn't exist. It is a dream."
